

organic rocks! You already know the benefits of living an organic lifestyle. But if you've ever felt that you had to choose between organic and stylish, you've got some catching up to do. A crop of of new designers is combining hip with healthy for great new products. One innovative northern Californian textile designer, Harmony Susalla of Harmony Art, is producing such colorful, nature-inspired textiles (printed with water-based inks instead of chemical dyes) that she could start a ready-to-wear revolution. Our pick this season is the light tote bag ($62) from a young Canadian designer using Harmony Art fabric. The mossy green bag with a soft sea-blue floral print strip and eye-catching red buttons will add a little Boho chic to your daywear or make a great accent to your studio wear. Visit citygirldesigns.ca for ordering information and harmonyart.com to learn more about the organic-textile revolution. —Alexandra Tallo seamless liberation

It's a simple fact that women understand women's bodies better than men do—at least when it comes to bras. And that's the beauty (literally) of Sassybax, a line of seamless bras designed by Amanda Horan Kennedy. Using microfiber and Lycra and leaving out uncomfortable underwires, clasps and hooks, this collection lifts and tucks to create flattering, curve-hugging silhouettes. The collection—racerback, strapless bandeau, tank and bra form—combats unsightly bulge and bra lines while accentuating our assets. The icing on the cake is how versatile Sassybax are: They take you from the studio to work to a night on the town.

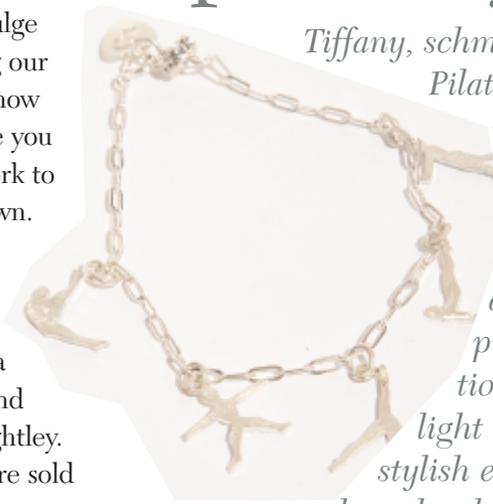

Celebrity fans include Catherine Zeta Jones, Vanessa Williams and Keira Knightley. Sassybax are sold at all Neiman-Marcus retail outlets, or visit sassybax.com for more information. ($58–$68).

—A.T.

perfectly charming

Tiffany, schmiffany. Check out the latest in Pilates accessories with a brand-new jewelry collection from Core Links. Designed by Pilates instructor Linda Moeller and hand-crafted by artisans, the sterling silver pieces are wearable representations of Pilates moves. They're light enough to wear to class and stylish enough to dangle at dinner. We love the charm bracelet ($42 and up). You can hook up to seven charms onto a skinny chain that's as delicate and graceful as the exercises themselves. Browse the entire line of necklaces, bracelets and earrings at ww.completelyfit4life.com. —A.A.